The command was given, I have said, to the authorized successors of those to whom our Lord first said, Go, preach the Gospel. The Church must have God-sent ministers, or it can never prosper. It will be a disaster which no words can state, nor thought measure, if in devising plans to meet the great demand for ministers, New York Observer, April 20th, 1850. the people of God overlook this, that the ministry by which the Church is to be blessed, must be a divinely commissioned and divinely assisted ministry. Men are not to assume this office without being called of God, as was Aaron. It is not learning, nor powers of eloquence alone, which qualify men for the ministry. They must have piety; they must have the spirit of that Master whom they profess to serve; they must have the Holy Spirit, without which they are none of His; they must have hearts perfumed with the fragrance of a divine charity, and every kindred grace; they must be apt to teach, and have a zeal for the glory of God, which will lead them on to self-denying labours, and to sympathize with Christ, in the cup and baptism of his sufferings. They must have a divine call. They must feel constrained by a sense of obligation to the Redeemer, and a love for dying souls. They must feel that both their usefulness and peace of...
