Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 176 pages. Josh Williams, ten years old, loves computers and computer games. A competition is launched at school to design a new computer game, the winner receiving a new computer. All Josh has is a second hand computer his father had brought home from his last trip away as a long distance lorry driver. The computer now had a problem, for some reason the colours are disappearing from the screen. A new computer would be fantastic. Josh is frustrated that the colour loss from his computer is making it very difficult to design a new computer game. He knows a lot about computers, but doesnt know how to fix this. The only way to get rid of the light is to put the disk into the computer. The boys discover the disk contains a game, something they both enjoy playing. Unfortunately, they soon learn the reason for the missing colours in the form of a rather nasty virus called the Spectre. The Spectre turns up in the most unexpected places, sucking any colours it can find into a black hole that makes up its body. The Spectre has the ability to change its shape and form, so the boys dont know it is there until they feel its magnetic force trying to absorb all the colours around it. And so begins their quest; to collect rings of colour from seven different screen savers, all the colours of the rainbow....
