Excerpt: .as much in the lessons as in our informal meetings, when--feeling free from the fetters of strict duty--they gave vent to their artistic impulses, unhampered by didactical considerations). Listly, all those young ladies need private lessons whose parents are either too rich, or too narrow (or both) to allow them to mingle with the common herd --in these horrid classes; they must take their lessons at home, and, if possible, in the same parlor in which, ou the same evening, they will sit from 9 P.ii until 14 o clock, with nothing but one poor young man for entertainment. Furthermore, invalids, and also those unfortunate advanced pupils who have to be done all over again, need private lessons; but they are, after all, exceptions. I am through, ladies and gentlemen, and I feel keenly that I am open to the special criticism, among a great many others, that I have not established any dogmatic doctrine about class tuition; that I have not said whether it is good or not, without some conditions and it s; but such was my purpose. I merely wanted to offer you the results of my investigation and leave it to you to draw your own conclusions. I have not even mentioned that, as there are pupils unfit for class tuition, there are also teachers, some good, excellent teachers, entirely unfit for class teaching. Whether they are bewildered at the sight of more than one pupil, or too impractical to...
